

Critical Illness Insurance

If you became seriously ill and lost your job, for how many months could you survive financially?

Statistically, we are more likely to be diagnosed with a critical illness than die during our working lives and with advancements in medicine, suffering a critical illness such as a heart attack, stroke or cancer, whilst being a life changing event, may not necessarily be a life-ending one. Consequently with survival rates improving we are now posed with additional challenges when it comes to financial planning – how will I cope if I survive a critical illness?

A life-changing illness can significantly impact the ability to work, reducing, or stopping altogether, your ability to earn.

As part of a recent Financial Survival survey* we asked the following question: If you became seriously ill and lost your job, for how many months could you survive financially?

The survey received responses from over 1,000 UAE residents from across gender, age, income, nationality, Emirate and relationship status segments.

The headline results were as follows:

- 57% wouldn't survive financially for more than 3 months if laid off due to critical illness
- 26% would not last a month

Critical illness insurance

Critical illness cover pays a lump sum following diagnosis of one or more of a wide range of conditions. This is a fixed amount not linked to the cost of treatment or other associated medical expenses. This offers added flexibility of using as insurance against both medical costs as well as any associated financial impact of a critical illness, providing either a complimentary or a replacement solution to Medical Insurance.

Whether it is the main breadwinner or their spouse that suffers a critical illness, the impact on their family can be similar in terms of medical expenses, loss of earnings and disruption to everyday life.

Critical illness insurance cover offers peace of mind that money will be available to help with the costs associated with the treatment of, as well as life after surviving a critical illness.
